

Covid: A redefined relation with nature

Covid-19 is merely a disease
Which has made the world to freeze,
It's brought to us
How our relationship with nature is disastrous.
Humans took nature as granted
And blessings of nature were always challenged.
Our artificial creations
Made us so selfish,
We kept on snatching away lives
Of animals for our selfish interest.
Today we are caged
And animals are free.
It is the fruit
Of our very own tree.
The air that made our soul pure
In our run of leading luxurious life
We made it polluted and snatched away its life; it's purity.
We kept on murdering
The trees and leading
To never ending deforestation
And infectious disease.
As it's result the pandemic is here.
This time nature
Is taking revenge
And costs our lives,
The same way we've been doing with nature's supplies.
The water that made
More than half of us,

We kept on killing the aquatic lives by the harmful chemicals.

Now when human activities

Are at pause

Mother Earth is healing,

The environment for once

Bounced back to life

So fast as if it was always

In search of these hours.

The COVID has brought back

The lost essence of our relationship with nature.

This pandemic though tough

Gives a lesson to remember for always.

Through all these tough hours

We are hearing the more birds chirping,

Seeing the greener forests,

Feeling the cleaner air,

Enjoying the purer rain,

We realised it's the utter need

To protect the nature and always pay heed.

We lead to conclusion

This COVID has redefined,

Redefined relation with nature.
